See photos: Pig barn with 10! height on six meters

Gråkjær is about to complete a running and control department on one of AC Farming's farms Gift shot.

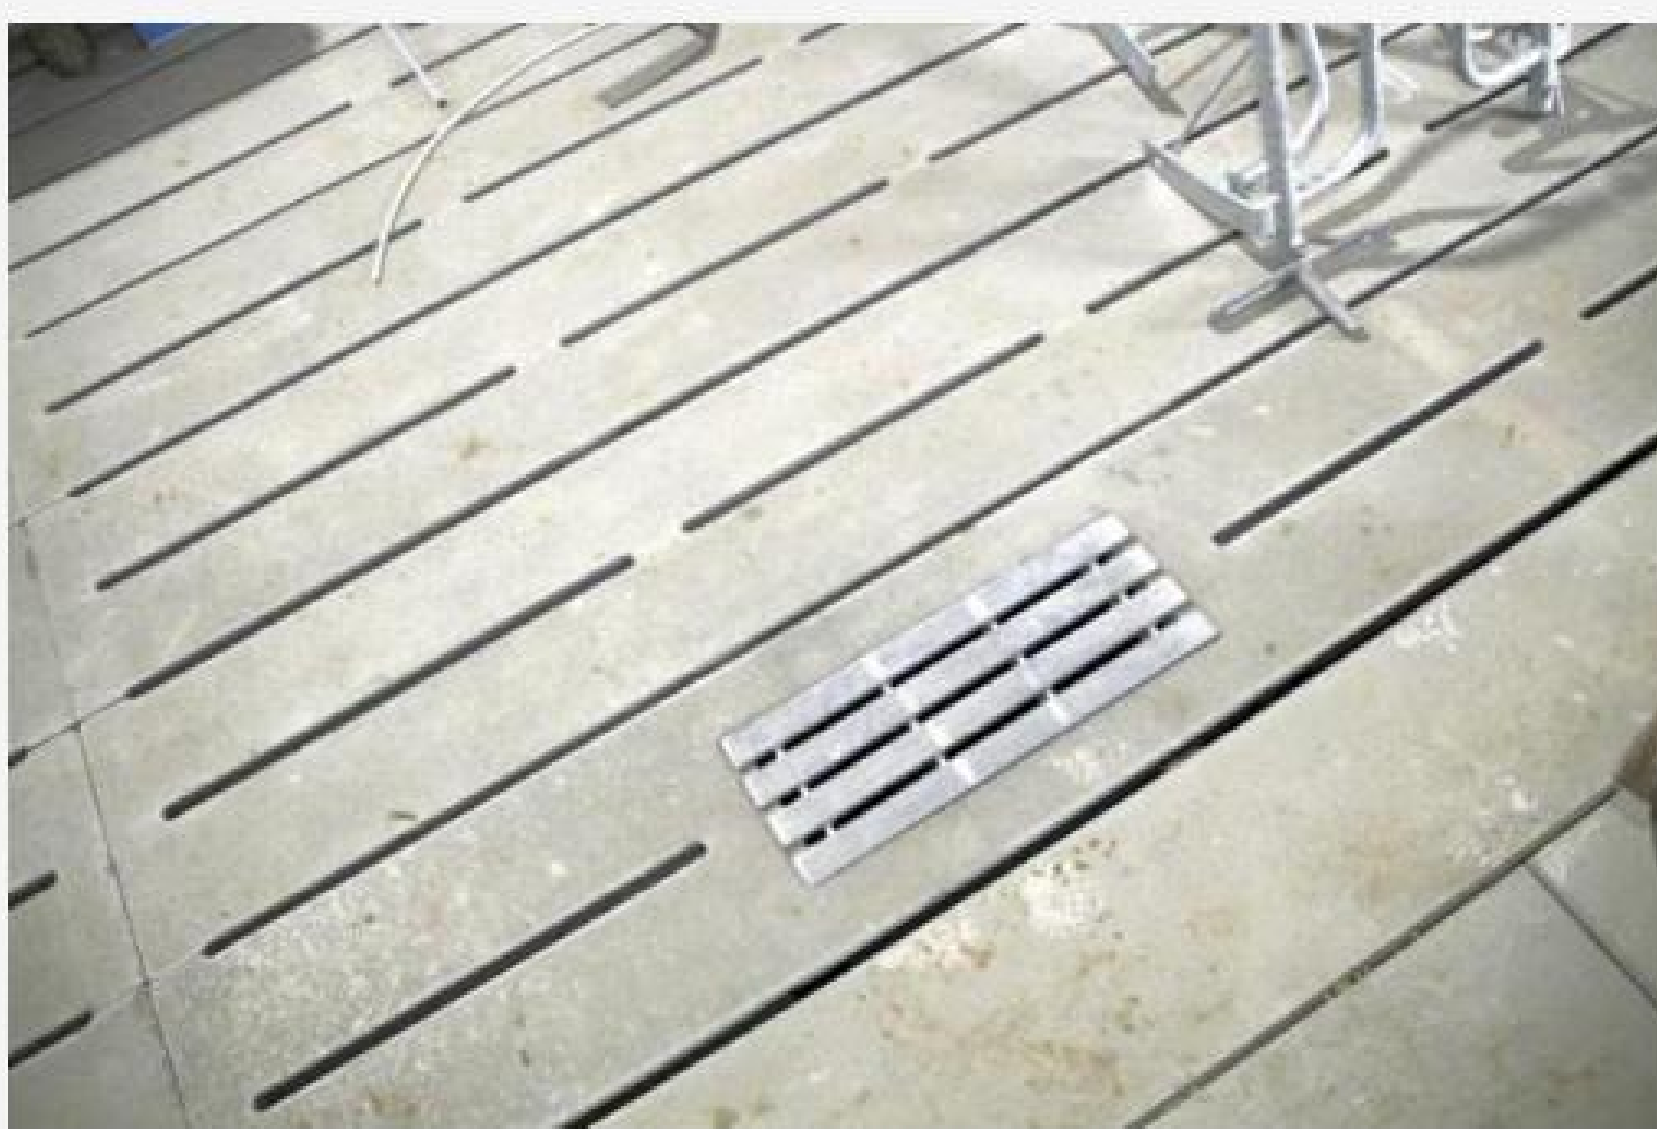

Ever the lack of payments from AC Farming to Gråkjær for the construction of 'Den Sorte Diamant', it emerged that AC Farming had financial difficulties. Photo: Søren Tøpperup

The construction of the 2,231 square meter black stable building is in full swing and looks like AC from the outside Farming's new running and control department is an industrial building, but it is a pigsty.

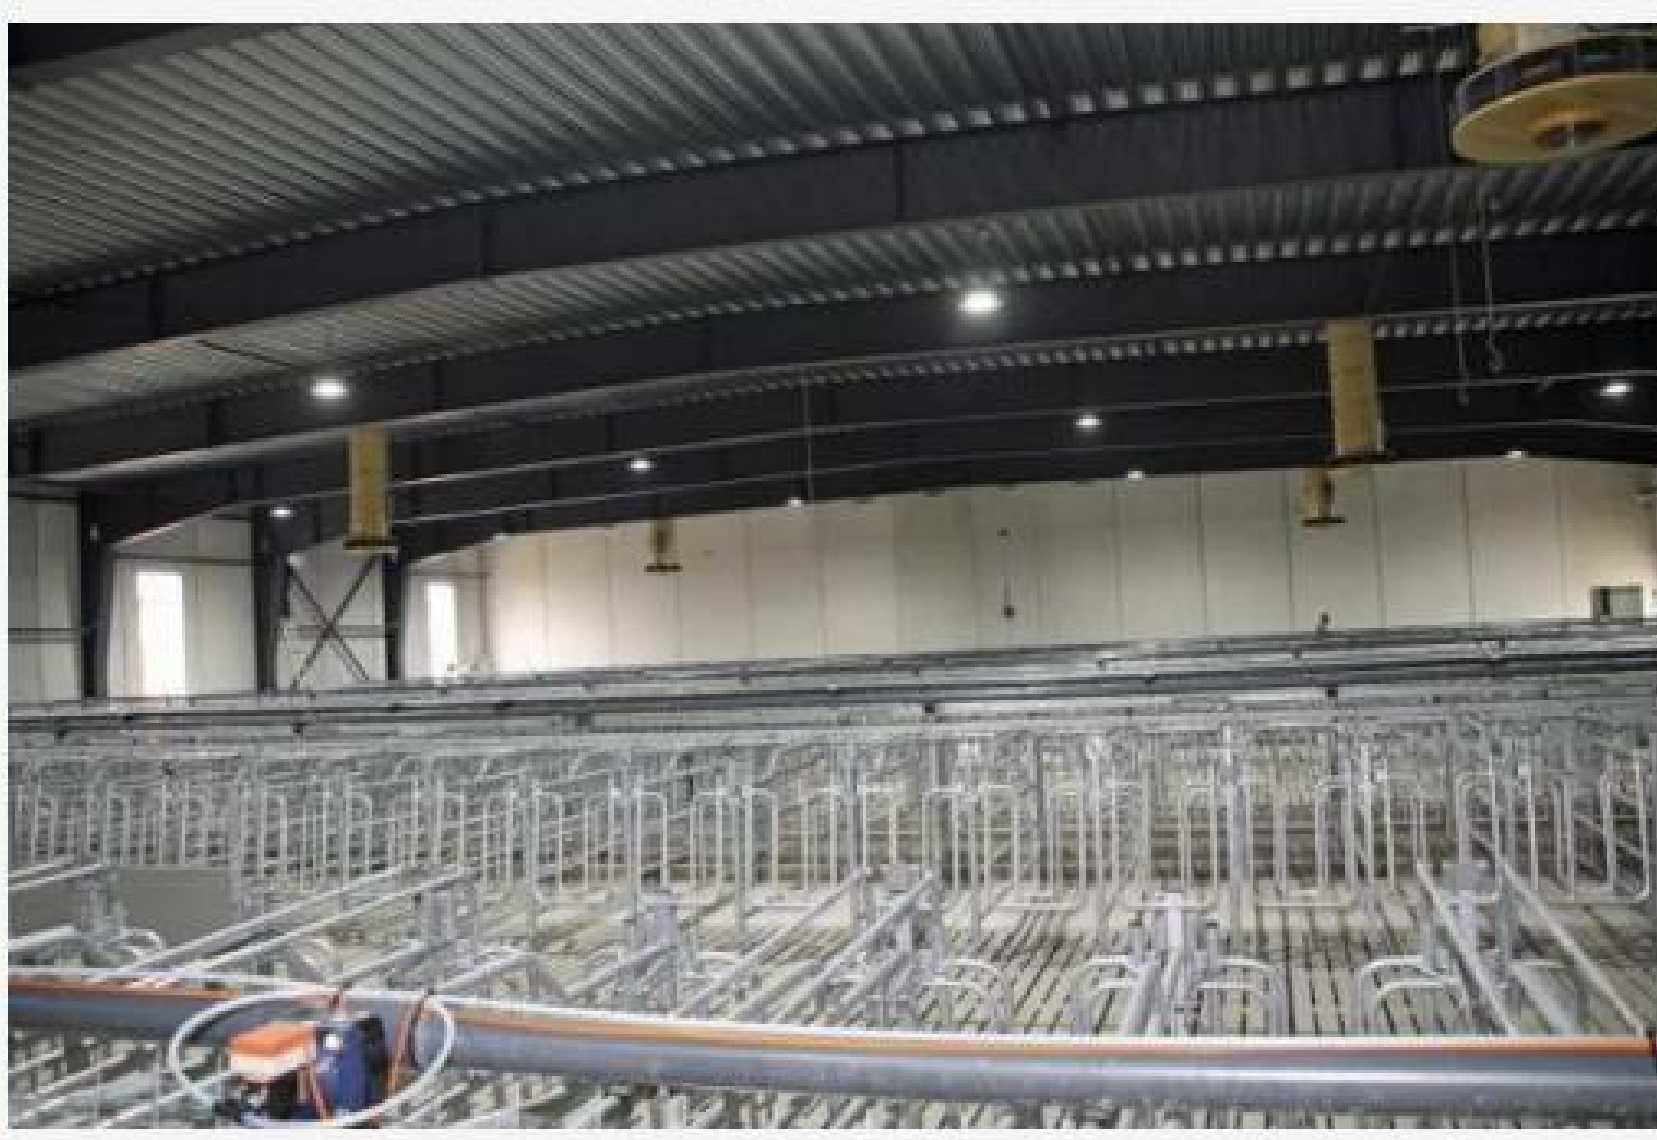

Together with Martin Rindom, director of agriculture at Gråkjær, Landbrugsavisen.dk has taken a look the stable is bursting at the seams.

The height of the new barn has made it easy to fit out the feed barn. Here has the Big Dutchman responsible for the feed solution.

Line winches have been placed under the slots to enable large quantities of straw for the lakes. There is built-in a limb in severagap elements, so larger lumps that cannot be pressed down through the columns, can come this way instead.

Investment has been made in LED lighting for the barn. Partly in the iolen, but lights have also been installed in front of everyone paddocks for better reproduction.

Here, another insight into how the led light runs parallel to the feed string, which can feed individually down to three or four lakes. Parts of the feed string are laid below floor level to provide so good view of the barn.
